

Automotive

The automotive industry's supply chain is a complex network of manufacturers, suppliers, and service providers working in tandem to deliver motor vehicles for personal and commercial use to end-user consumers. Greenbaum understands how motor vehicle manufacturers, finance entities, distributors and dealers do business – we understand the dynamics that “drive” their relationships and define their differing interests. We stay abreast of developments in technology that impact the products involved, as well as related federal and state laws, consumer protection statutes, and industry best practices, which are all critical to effective legal representation of clients in the automotive sector.

Areas of Focus

- Product liability litigation
- Manufacturing/design defects
- Consumer Fraud Act claims
- Fair Credit Reporting Act claims
- Risk management and policy guidance
