

Corporate Transparency Act Reporting: You Can Do It - We Can Help!

The Corporate Transparency Act (CTA) is a federal law that requires many business entities to disclose information about their business ownership to the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN). The CTA was enacted to prevent and combat money laundering, tax fraud, and corruption, and became effective on January 1, 2024.

This lunch hour complimentary webinar will provide helpful guidance for both small businesses with simple ownership structures who will likely handle reporting inhouse, as well as larger and more complex entities who might benefit from assistance from an external resource.

The program agenda includes a review of key points of the CTA and helpful pointers to ensure legal compliance for businesses with reporting requirements. Greenbaum partner Fay L. Szakal, who focuses her practice on corporate, real estate and healthcare transactions and supports the firm's clients regarding their compliance obligations, if any, under the CTA, will address the following topics during this presentation:
