

Lessons Learned - Virtual Meetings, Electronic Elections, & What Radburn Means to Your HOA

Caroline Record was a presenter at this virtual town hall presentation. The pandemic raised serious questions about how boards can conduct business and residents can participate in the governance of their communities while social distancing. This offered professional advice and clarity on everything from setting up remote meetings to implementing electronic voting, to tabulating results - including an overview of the laws and regulations governing such measures, and lessons learned from implementing the new Radburn guidelines. Panelists discussed how communities can meet challenges around connectivity and web access to ensure that all community members are able to participate fully, and what to look for when your community is seeking help with your own election process.
