David serves as the firm's IT Director, where he bridges the gap between high-level security and operational excellence. With extensive expertise in virtualization, networking, and security, David held significant roles at numerous regional and national law firms before joining the firm in 2018. Since that time, he has led Greenbaum through a total digital transformation, including the implementation of advanced AI systems and a robust Zero Trust security architecture. By focusing on "responsible innovation," he provides our legal teams with the sophisticated tools they need to stay competitive while maintaining a frictionless user experience. David's leadership ensures that Greenbaum's technological foundation provides our clients with world-class data security and the digital agility required in today's legal landscape. This translates into an uncompromising environment of data privacy that keeps sensitive matters protected by the industry's most advanced safeguards.
