Emily is an experienced commercial litigator who assists clients in the resolution of business, estate and trust, and personal disputes through strategic counseling, alternative dispute resolution (ADR) including negotiation and mediation, and litigation in state and federal courts. She brings a practical approach to resolving conflicts, taking into account the client's budget, potential legal exposure, and litigation tolerance, and working closely with the client to develop a strategy that best meets their objectives given the specific facts of their case.

Emily's experience includes contract disputes arising under licensing, operating and asset sale agreements, environmental contamination cleanup and contribution actions, and the prosecution and defense of financing, credit and other banking matters. She has represented clients in both state and federal courts, including appellate practice before the New Jersey Supreme Court, Appellate Division and the U.S. Third Circuit Court of Appeals. Her work in chancery practice includes estate and trust litigation involving breach of fiduciary duty, testator's or grantor's intent, undue influence, and other issues, claims for injunctive relief in business disputes including shareholder oppression cases, and restrictive covenant litigation. Her experience also encompasses complex litigation involving class action lawsuits focused on consumer claims, alleged securities fraud, and personal injury.

Emily has conducted and assisted with internal investigations on behalf of public and private entities in connection with a variety of matters. Her experience in this area includes inquiries into allegations of bid rigging on behalf of a public entity, the investigation of alleged employee harassment in the workplace, inquiries into allegations of financial improprieties, and internal investigations conducted in response to governmental subpoenas.
