Greenbaum's real estate practice is a foundational element of our firm's history and its future. Successfully navigating the complexities of New Jersey's commercial real estate sector requires an intimate understanding of the market, including the drivers within each market sector. The firm's deep knowledge of New Jersey's unique real estate landscape, and involvement in countless sophisticated and high-value transactions across all sectors of the market, has earned us a position of prominence, as well as trust and respect, within the state's real estate and business communities.

Our team represents clients in the acquisition, disposition, leasing, financing, construction, renovation and "greening" of commercial, industrial, and residential real estate throughout New Jersey. Our work on behalf of buyers, sellers, lenders, borrowers, landlords, tenants, investors, entrepreneurs, and public and private real estate investment trusts (REITS) encompasses the full range of issues related to both routine and highly complex real estate deals. Our seamlessly integrated approach to land use, zoning, redevelopment and environmental issues – including the transactional structuring and contractual allocation of environmental risk – ensures that every transaction is executed efficiently, risks are mitigated, and value is maximized.

The firm's experience encompasses individual property and portfolio transactions, as well as membership and stock purchase and sale transactions. Our work covers all sectors of the commercial market including warehouse and storage facilities, multifamily and mixed-use projects, shopping centers, healthcare facilities, data centers, restaurants, hotels, and all ownership forms including fee ownership, ground leases, condominiums and cooperatives, and planned real estate communities. Many transactions include solar and other alternative energy installations, adding an additional level of complexity that the firm is able to address due to the depth of its alternative energy practice. Our real estate team blends a wide-ranging knowledge of transactional issues with a focused and business-oriented problem-solving perspective.
